

'Dollhouse' gal Eliza Dushku's goal: Send girls to camp

Eliza Dushku is a woman on a mission.

The Hollywood honey dropped by United South End Settlements yesterday to co-present a $61,000 check to the organization's CEO, Kevin Hepner. The donation will benefit Camp Hale, the USES-owned New Hampshire summer camp the "Dollhouse" star's brothers and father attended as children.

With her brother Aaron, niece Sofia and nephew Kyle in tow, Eliza told the children her goal is to get girls admitted to the camp. "I want to make it so girls can go and have just as much fun as boys," Eliza told the kids.

Hiwan and Naomi, two 8-year-old students from Cathedral Grammar School, told Eliza they visited Camp Hale for a night as part of the USES after-school program and hope to return if girls are admitted.

"We hiked, swam in the lake ... the rocks hurted my feet!" Hiwan told the Track.

But the Dushku family's giving doesn't stop there. They recently launched Humanitar, an endowment fund that will allow them to raise money for their favorite charities. The name is derived from "humanitarian" in Albanian, the country of their father's ancestry.
